

Won't you come on a journey with me to discover
What this creature could be that looks like no other?

Let's go and ask some friends that I know.
We'll hear what they think and see how we go.

Let's start with the zebra – all stripey and fat.

He takes one look and says, 'What on earth's that?'

He has no idea about this strange little fellow.

We'll have to move on ...

Let's ask someone yellow!

A vertical column of ants of various sizes and colors (red, black, yellow) is positioned along the left edge of the page.

We'll ask a chap who is yellow and brown,
When he talks his long neck has to bend right down,
I show this weird thing to my friend the giraffe
But he takes one look and gives a big laugh!

I'll tell you some more about this little dude
(Block your ears mum and dad, this next bit's quite rude!)

Just kidding – only trying to keep your attention!

'Cause this is a fact that's important to mention ...

Guess what boys and girls – hold onto your pants!

Our mystery animal eats termites and ants!

There's a rhino I know and his name is Ray.

I'll ask him and hear
what he has to say ...

'This thing's armour-plated and grey-brown like me.

But that's where it ends any likeness, you see.

This thing can roll itself into a ball,

And there's no way that I can – no, not at all!

Let us ask Patrick, the very big elephant

See if he can tell us anything relevant.

I give him the facts and he wrinkles his brow

As he thinks and he ponders on what, where and how.

'I don't know what it is but I may well be right

In thinking this creature only comes out at night!'

Right! Off to the owl with his huge round eyes,

People say he is old and terribly wise

But he is just grumpy and awfully flat.

(I think he just wants to catch a fat rat!)
